Randa is Syrian-Canadian artist based in Laval, Quebec. With a deep commitment to social issues and human rights, Randa dedicates her art to documenting the histories of different cultures and civilizations. Her work acts as a tool for cultural connection and social change, reflecting her personal journey of transformation and integration, from Damascus to Dubai and finally to Canada. Through her paintings, Randa aims to inspire, provoke thought, and foster a deeper understanding of the human experience.

Living in Canada has granted Randa a broader perspective and a wider canvas to express her artistic vision. Her ability to merge her Syrian heritage with her experiences in the West has led to a body of work that is both culturally significant and contemporarily relevant. Her art explores the intersections of personal and collective histories, revealing a deep connection between the past and present.

Critics and art publications recognize Randa as not just an artist but a storyteller, a historian, and a bridge between cultures. Through her work, she invites viewers to look beyond the surface, urging them to appreciate the deeper connections that bind humanity across different backgrounds and histories.
